Ford Confronted By Deep Rifts at Economic Talks

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.

WASHINGTON, Scot. 27 (NYT).-Deep and seemingly unerid; aable differences on how to curb inflation and meet other problems of the economy emerged today at an economic "summit" meeting called by President Ford.

The differences emerged between Democrats and Republicans and among the numerous private interest groups represented.

Of the nearly 800 nongovernment delegates plus numerous members of Congress and the Ford administration officials involved in the meeting here, almost 100, including members of Congress, had chance to express their views today. They differed vastly, both in their perception of what is wrong in the United States and what

In particular, the President received anything but unanimous support for his view, and that of all his main economic advises. that the root of the inflation problem is excessive government spending and borrowing. Many of the suggestions made—including widespread backing for a much larger program of federal grants state and local governments to hire the unemployed-would involve more spending.

Many of the participants, with organized labor in the lead stressed the problem of the nation's recession, with the prospect of higher unemployment rather than inflation.

Mr. Ford heard some tough words, and the toughest were directed at Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board A delegate, Murray Miller, secretary-treasurer of the Teamsters' Union, won applause when he suggested that the President "clean house" of all his advisers, including Mr. Burns.

But there was also applause -clearly from a different part of the audience-when William Kuhfuss, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. only one previously scheduled said unequivocally that "the root cause of inflation is deficit spending by the government and the resulting increase in the money supply."

Lonely Struggle

In his remarks, Mr. Burns repeated his view that inflation was the cause of most of the nation's problems—from slaggish constaner spending to a depressed stock market and housing industryand he emphasized that budget restraint must help the Pederal Reserve in its "lonely struggle against inflation."

But he said that the Federal Reserve had "been able recently to take actions that have reduced somewhat the pressures on the banking system," with a result of declining short-term interest rates, While the Federal Reserve will make sure that "the supply of money and credit keep moving upward," Mr. Burns said, it will also "persevere in pursuing monetary policies that are necessary to curb our rampant inflation."

The deep divisions came to the surface at the outset of the meeting. Following brief opening re-marks by Mr. Ford, the first speakers were Carl Albert, D-Okia, the speaker of the House, and Mike Mansfield of Montana. the Democratic leader in the Senate. The two Democratic leaders left no doubt that their ideas for curbing the nation's economic problems were very different from those of the President's advisers and presumably those of the President himself.

Bank Heads To Join U.S. Big-5 Talks

Meeting of Ministers At Camp David, Md.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 (UPI). -A private weekend meeting of foreign and finance ministers of the United States and four other major oil-consuming nations has been expanded to include the chairmen of the central banks in the five countries, the State Department said today.

State Department spokesman Robert Anderson announced the move in the first official statement on details of the meeting at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., of Secretary of State Henry Kitsinger and representatives of Britain Fran West Germany and Japan.

Mr. Anderson said four foreign ministers and five finance ministers will attend the meeting. Britain's foreign secretary. James Callaghan, will be represented by deputy, he said.

The foreign ministers will par-ticipate only in tomorrow's session. The finance ministers will stay overnight and resume the discussions on Sunday with the bank representatives. Mr. Ander-

He said the meeting would center on the international economic situation. But some diplomatic sources said they believed the principal reason for the gathering of the five major oilconsumer nations was to discuss the soaring costs of petroleum,

But he said that the whole Cabinet agrees on the plan, announced in the Labor party's election manifesto, to let the nation vote in a referendum within 12 months on whether Britain should stay in the European Economic Community.

"People are amazed," Mr. Wilson said at his daily campaign news conference, "that anyone in politics or in the media has only just discovered that there are some colleagues in the Labor party, in the Cabinet, who are dedicated supporters of the Common Market and of British membership of it.

"But the whole Cabinet is agreed on the statement we have put forward in this election and as set out in the manifesto. We are fighting the election on this."

No Criticism

Practically nothing has been written to date in the Western press about the widespread abuse of power and office in the name of business because foreign journalists residing in Nairobi say they live under the constant threat of expulsion for any criticism of the government and particularly of Mr. Kenyatta.

Kenya's high-handed treatment of U.S. businessmen dates back to early this year when the managing director of ESSO Standard Kenya, Ltd., James Skane, was expelled on short notice with no explanation.

. It seems that Mr. Skane's main "crime" was a persistent and perhaps undiplomatic effort to collect a two-year-old bill owed by Mr. Kenyatta to ESSO for gasoline delivered to one of his farms near Nakuru, about 100 miles northwest of Nairobi.

The bill still has not been paid and now amounts to the equivalent of about $70,000, according to excellent sources. Several other foreign and Kenyan oil companies are also owed substantial amounts by the President, these sources say.

The major case that now is the talk of the American business community involves two geologists and businessmen, John Saul and Elliott Miller, who a year ago discovered the ruby mine which, they believe, is the largest in the world. The mine has not been fully explored and no dollar value can be put on it now.

Quick Expulsion

On June 18, Mr. Saul was expelled without any given reason on an order issued from State House, the President's residence. Within seven hours of the notice, he was on a plane to LONDON, Sept. 27 (AP).-British shoppers have been on a panic buying spree for weeks after rumors spread that there was an acute sugar shortage. Supermarkets have reported that normally placid shoppers have turned stores into stampedes

The panic buying of sugar began several weeks ago, apparently stemming from the widespread anxiety about Britain's economic problems and inflation

Fears of a sugar shortage were reinforced when producers began hiking their prices and a major food-store chain warned last month that the government may have to impose rationing.

The government repeatedly has insisted there is no sugar shortage. The Consumer Council, a shoppers' watchdog group, claimed this week that sugar supplies had not dropped below 70 per cent of normal

Some resort to feminine wiles. A Midlands store owner said he has never been "chatted up" by so many women before. "I feel like a movie star," he said. In the wealthy Glasgow suburb of Bearsden, a group of housewives reportedly obtained copies of the times and locations of sugar deliveries to a food-store chain. In London's well-to-do Kensington district, a group of women hired elderly pensioners to keep watch outside stores and tip

Colson Asks Presidential Pardon

By Jules Witcover

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 (WP). Charles Colson, a former White House special counsel who is serving a one-to-three-year prison term for obstruction of justice, has asked President Ford for a pardon, the White House reported Colson thus is the first major Watergate figure to request a presidential pardon since Mr. Ford granted one to Colson's former boss, Richard Nixon, The White House has said that all pardons will be considered on an individual basis, Colson culminated intensive plea-bargaining with the office of special prosecutor Leon Jaworski in June by pleading guilty to spreading derogatory information about Daniel Ellsberg in 1971 after Mr. Elsberg had leaked the Pentagon papers. In return, Mr. Jaworski dropped charges against Colson in the White House "plumbers" and Watergate cover-up prosecutions.

At the White House yesterday, the Nixon pardon and associated questions. President Ford's new press secretary got plenty of questions but gave few answers about congressional reaction to the pardon of and the accompanying agreements to recognize Mr. Nixon's ownership of the White House tapes and to seek $850,000 transition expense money.

Ronald Nessen, the press secre-tary, said, "No decision has been made" on how Mr. Ford will respond to a Capitol Hill reques that he explain his reasons for the pardon. He said that it was premature to inquire whether the President planned to invoke executive privilege for the first

Judge Orders Delay

Chief Judge John Brown of the U.S. Court of Appeals in New Orleans yesterday granted a stay of the lower court order until Monday to allow the Army time to present a written motion for a 15-day stay.

Charles Colson

Asked whether Mr. Ford would oppose legislation that would abrogate the agreement whereby the tapes are to be sent to California and kept under Mr. Nixon's control, the press secretary said, "The question of the tapes is in the legislative process. I think we'll have to wait and see what Congress comes out with." Finally, Mr. Nessen was unable to say whether the President personally approved of his own administration's request to Congress for $850,000 in transition and other expenses for Mr. Nixon, Mr. Nessen tried to emphasize that the agreement on the expense payments was negotiated and that the money was requested by the General Services Administration with "transmittal to Congress from the White House." But asked specifically whether the President personally approved the deal, he said: "I don't know whether he personally approved it or not. I have no reason to suspect one way or the other on that. But it was sent to the Hill [Congress] over his name in his official capacity. Obviously, Asked whether it could not be assumed from that fact that Mr Ford had personally approved, Mr. Nessen replied: "I wouldn't assume one way or the other." Would the President sign something of which he didn't approve. he was asked, "I'm going to have to find out about that," the press secretary said.

Jaworski Asks Separate Trial For Strachan in Cover-Up

By George Lardner Jr.

-Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski moved yesterday to drop former White House aide Gordon Strachar as a defendant in next week's Watergate cover-up trial. Mr. Jaworski asked U.S. District Judge John Sirica to put off Mr. Strachan's trial in light of his protests that the government's evidence against him was

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 (WP).

Watergate prosecutors have steadily denied Mr. Strachan's claims but the dispute has never been resolved. In a 5-to-1 decision last week, the U.S. Court of Appeals simply ruled that Mr Strachan would have to stand trial with the other defendants and wait until later to press his Troublesome Issues However, chief Appeals Court Judge David Bazelon said that Mr. Strachan's petition did present "very troublesome issues" which would have to be considered at the conclusion of the coverup trial. The dissenting judge, George Mackinnon, said that he thought the former White House aide was entitled to a decision now instead of being forced to go through a lengthy trial Citing the views of both appellate court judges, Mr. Jaworski said that he felt "justice would be better served" by endorsing a separate trial for Mr. Strachan. This would also prevent any other convictions at the coverup trial from being overturned because of Mr. Strachan's claims. A former deputy to White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman, Mr. Strachan was accused in the cover-up indictment of obstruction of justice, conspiracy to obstruct justice and lying to the Watergate grand jury about a $350,000 cash fund for the original Watergate defendants. His lawyer, John Bray, has been pressing since spring for dismissal of the charges because of what Mr. Bray called ". n honorable deal" that government prosecutors made with Mr. Strachan last year.

Mr. Strachan told the grand jury April 11, 1973, that he had given Frederick La Rue, a Nixon re-election campaign deputy, the cash fund on his own initiative. He failed to disclose that he had made the deliveries on instructions from John Dean 3d, who was then White House However, Mr. Bray said that a week later, on April 18, Mr. Strachan went back to govern-Seymour Glanzer and "told them the whole story" after being promised that nothing he said would be used against him, directly or indirectly.

Watergate prosecutors maintained that the charges against Mr. Strachan are still solidly based on independent testimony from Dean and other confessed conspirators such as La Rue and former Nixon campaign official Jeb Stuart Magruder.

Judge Sirica upheld the prosecutors after evidentiary hearings this summer, but Mr. Bray continued to protest. He said that the government had at least used the information Mr. Strachan supplied in making basic decisions, such as whether or not he should be prosecuted.

Whether this was permissible has yet to be settled. In his motion yesterday, Mr. Jaworski acknowledged that "it may be unfair to subject. . . Strachan to the rigors of a trial of this magnitude without further pretrial exploration of what appears to be, at least, a close legal question."

The cover-up trial is scheduled to start Tuesday. Rather than delay it for the five other defendants, Mr. Jaworski suggested that Mr. Strachan be granted a separate trial with the understanding that he would first be granted a full and final hearing to resolve his complaints

Two U.S. Satellites Impede Work of Radio Telescopes

-Two satellites hanging over the east and west coasts of South America for the last four months have blocked observation of parts of the heavens for more than a dozen radio telescopes in the United States, Canada and satellites' radio signals has been so bad that some telescopes have been unable to keep watch on the afternoon sun. Others have lost day and night observations of distant quasers and pulsers, which many astronomers believe to be the most intricate and challenging stars in the skies.

The two satellites thus hover over the same spots on earth, ATS over the Galapagos Islands in the Pacific, west of Ecuador, and SMS over the Atlantic east of Brazil

Therein lies at least part of the trouble. The signals of both satellites come from a fixed part of the southwest sky, meaning that in that part of the sky, observation of stars broadcasting radio signals anywhere near the frequencies of the satellite broadcasts is impossible.

The filter failed to narrow sufficiently the signal so that large radio telescopes at Greenbank, the Owens Valley Observatory (OVO) of California Institute of Technology and the Algonouin Park Observatory in Canada have often confused ATS signals with those coming from stars.

The signal broadcast by the SMS overlaps a frequency used by radio telescopes listening for transmissions from oxygen-hydrogen clouds between galaxies. There clouds are electrified by cosmic rays then broadcast their message on the same frequency used by the SMS satellite.

Radio astronomers first learned that SMS broadcasts would overlap their hydroxyl signal after the satellite began sending back weather pictures May 17. Nobody in the space agency had told them that the weather salaries of $42,500 a year, But now they may have found a way to raise their incomes without increasing their salaries.

A little-noticed tax loophole recently approved by the House Ways and Means Committee as part of its work on an omnibus tax bill, in effect, would add about $1.700 to the annual income of a typical senator or congressman. Moreover, the amount of the benefit would increase automatically in pace with future inflation. If approved by Congress and signed into law by the Preisdent, the device would work this way:

senators may deduct $3,000 a year from income when calculating taxes for living expenses while they are in Washington. The assumption is that their principal residences are in the states they represent and that they must bear the extra expense of maintaining second living quarters in the Washington area. Actually, many members of Congress own homes in or around Washington, where they or their families live most of the year.

Under the new tax provision approved by the Ways and Means nmittee, the living expense deduction would be increased beginning Jan. 1. The amount of the increase would be equivalent to the rate at which consumer prices in the Washington area have risen during the last 22 years—about 90 percent. Thus, the $3,000 deduction would be raised to about $5,700. Thereafter, the deduction would be increased every two years to take into account subsequent inflation. The value of the deduction varies with the tax bracket of the individual congressman or senator. in the 39 per cent tax bracket—considered relatively low—the tax saving from an increase of $2,700 in the living expense deduction would amount to about $1,050 :

But the effective value of the deduction would be more than that, because in this tax bracket the congressman or senator would have to have a salary increase of more than $1,700 to obtain $1,050 worth of additional, after tax spending power. In higher tax brackets, the increased living-expense deduction vould be even more valuable. C Los Angeles Times.

Russia Sets Aid for Large Families

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW, Sept. 27 (NYT) .-The Soviet government, in a move to alleviate poverty in large families and to counteract the nation's falling birthrate, today announced a 3.2-billion-ruble-ayear ($2.4 hillion) program of financial support for 12.5 million

Pravda, the Communist party daily, reported that the Council of Ministers and Communist party Central Committee had approved allowances of $15 a month to children under eight years of age in families where the total per capita income is below $66.50 a month. The program goes into effect Nov. 1

Although the press reports did not say so, the program in effect set a poverty standard in the Soviet Union because assistance is to be based purely on income

Soviet propaganda has always contended that poverty was eliminated in this country and treats it as a phenomenon of capitalist society or under-developed economies in Africa, Asia and Latin America. Guidelines Set

But the guidelines for the childsupport program in effect set an income of about $3,300 a year for a family of four as a measure of

The Soviet press reported that $2.4 billion was being allocated annually for the program, provid-ing enough funds for 13.5 million children under the age of eight. The principal beneficiaries were expected to be in rural areas where incomes are still well be-

Mrs. Peron Says Guerrillas Aim to Provoke Military Coup

(UPD,-President Isabel Peron yesterday warned that a guerrilla assassination compaign was aimed at provoking a military coup and Argentina's top military commander said that army troops were ready to shed their blood to defend the continuing return to constitutional governmen

Mrs. Peron, flanked by officers from the armed forces, announce ed on a special television broadcast that she had sent to Congress a tough new bill which would crack down on the guerrillas thought to be responsible for Wednesday's slayings of two army officers and the wounding

The bill was quickly passed by the Senate and sent to the lower house for debate.

Meanwhile, Silvio Frondizi, 67, a leftist lawyer and brother of a former president, was kidnapped here today by gunnen. His body was found later near the Buenos Aires airport. Mr. Frondizi's brother Arturo was elected president in 1958 and was overthrown by a military coup in 1962.

Provocation Cited

Mrs. Peron, 43, who succeeded to the presidency in July after the death of her husband, Juan Peron said the guerrillas who killed the army officers "are trying to provoke a reaction that could oblige their [army] comrades to break with the constitutional state. More than 80 persons have been killed in political violence this year, with several of the most recent murders attributed to the Argentine Anti-Imperialist

Alliance, a rightist terrorist group that claims to have killed at least 13 persons in an anti-leftist campaign.

The People's Revolutionary Army (ERP), a Marxist guerrilla group, claimed credit for at least one of Wednesday's killings as part of its plan to execute 16 army officers. The plan is sup-posed to avenge the deaths of 16 ERP members last month during the only anti-guerrilla campaign the civilian government has entrusted to the army. The ERP claimed that the 16 guerrillas were slain after they were captured. The army denied under $186 a month. SYRIA: ECONOMY AND TOURISM

Syria in Brief

- -The Syrian Arab Republic is located in Western Asia, overlooking the Eastern Mediterranean Sea, between latitudes 30-37.5 north and longitudes 36-42 east.
- -Syria covers an area of 185,180 square kilometers, and has a population of 7 mil-
- -Damascus, the capital, is the oldest city in the world.
- -Major cities: Aleppo, Homos, Hama, Latakia, Tartous and Deir El-Zour.

Basic Economic Guidelines

The Syrian national economy is based on three major sectors: Agriculture, Industry and Trade. It is a developing economy but major steps have been achieved towards progress and construction.

1. - Agricultural Sector:

Syria is primarily an agricultural country. Agriculture is depended on by 65% of the population, and is not only a major national product for exportation, but also contributes I large percentage to the gross national product. Out of a total area of 18.5 million nectures, only 8.8 million hectures are being iffectively used for agriculture. The corrective novement under the leadership of President tatez Al Assad played a key role in the levelopment of both plant and animal aspects of agriculture, with a special effort to ncrease the production of wheat, cotton, tosacco and sugar beet. Cotton is a principal economic product which the government, brough the general institution of ginning and narketing of cotton, has taken effective steps o purchase, store, market and export to world markets. In 1973, the government purchased 419,000 tons of cotton, out of which 122,000 tons were exported.

l'obacco is also an important product in Syria. It is estimated that Syria exports about 21 million Syrian pounds worth of tobacco each year. The government is working on a special program to improve the productivity and organization of this product. As for cereals, in 1972, Syria produced 2.562 nillion tons, with wheat the largest product, reaching a record of 1.808 million tons. In addition, there are other agricultural products such as vegetables, fruits and olives. There me also agricultural industries such as canring, oil, scap, textiles, in addition to covering he needs of food products in the region. The Ministry of Agriculture is making enornous efforts to increase production in animal produce. Farms raising cows, sheep, goats, and fish, as well as chicken forms, have sprung up in various areas of the country. The aim of this important project is to reach at least 50% of the total agricultural income.

THE LEADING EUPHRATES AGRICULTURAL PROJECT:

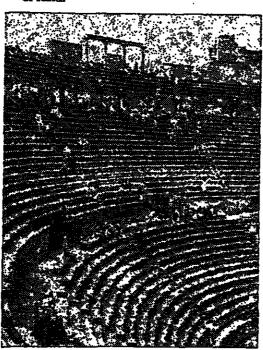

This project is crowning all other agriculural efforts which have been executed thus ar in the Five-Year Economic Plan 1971-75. The building of this dam is a clear-cut indicaion of the special attention given by the tevolution of March 8 to the economic and social welfare of the population. The work on the dam started on March 6, 1968, and celebration of the diversion of the river took place on July 5, 1973, under the aegis of President Hafez Al Assad.

AIMS OF THE PROJECT:

that includes:

- 1-800,000 kilowatts of electric energy will be produced:
- 2-640,000 hectores of fertile land will be irrigated;
- 3-Diversion of the river will prevent floods which could have a devastating effect. A highly-trained technical staff will gain experience in the building of dams and of land.

2. - Industrial Sector:

Industry in Syria is relatively new, and still in the process of development, but the govemment, with the participation of friendly countries, is taking special care to embark on several projects such as textiles, sugar, brick and leather factories, thus increasing industrial output and investment of capital. The present government policy, of openness following the corrective movement, is to encourage private investment for industrial projects, and as an indication of this trend. 504 projects were carried out in 1973 with private investment estimated at about eighty million Syrian pounds. Cooperation between the private and public sectors has been effective since the 1971 Five-Year Plan using modern technical methods. The public sector's share has reached 58% of the total production.

The Industrial Unions have also been active in industrial production. Between the three unions (Union of Textile Industry, Union of Food Industry and Union of Engineering and Chemical Industries), production for the year 1973 was about 898 million Syrian poundson increase of 15% from 1971. This increase was due to the improvement of workers' standard of living and expansion of present total global production, actual sales and exports of the three unions for the years 1972-1973 with the amounts given in thousands of Syrian pounds.

The dam is considered to be the backbone for growth in economic and social planning

3. - Petroleum Industry:

Petroleum, which is produced and refined in Syria, is a very important economic bloodstream. In 1973, 5,392,459 cubic meters of crude oil were produced from the fields of Sweida, Kratchuk and Rmailan. The refinery at Homos has the capacity to process one million tons of crude oil annually, and plans are under way to increase the present capacity. Plans are also under study for the construction of two more large refineries, one in Latakia, and the other in Tabaka or Kamishly. The following is a chart of oil derivatives in Syria for the year 1973:

4 - Foreign Trade:

exportation.

The present policy of Syria is to export finished or semi-finished products instead of exporting purely raw materials, and to import only the necessities which are not available in Syria.

Foreign trade plays an important role, and its contribution to the net national income in 1973 was equivalent to 1,154.4 million Syrian pounds—an increase of 9 %.

It is quite clear that the economic policy of Syria is to serve the people of Syria and to provide them with a higher standard of living. With this aim in mind, Syria is opening her doors to foreign investments, and wishes to foster her relationships with other major countries that also pursue an open economic policy. This open policy is the only way to achieve constructive growth, presperity, and peace.

Tourism and Antiquity:

By virtue of her geographic position, Syria has been throughout history a gateway between East and West, through which have passed many different peoples and civilizations, all contributing to a unique artistic heritage of major touristic interest.

The most important characteristics that have given Syria her fame are: the successive flow of changing civilizations, the temperate climate, the almost year-round bright sunshine, the natural beauty of the country side, and the charming, unpolluted Mediterranean coast.

The following are the major historical cities and sites that remain from ancient civilizations, and that are of scientific and touristic importance today.

A. ANCIENT PERIOD

- 1 The ancient ruins of the city of (Marie), located on the Euphrates river, dating back to 3000 and 2000 B.C. Marie is famous for its wide palaces and temples.
- 2 The ancient ruins of the city of (Augarieth), located on the Syrian coast near Latakia, dating to the middle of the year 2000 B.C. Augarieth is famous for its beautiful stone structure. The engineering and planning of its construction still remain a major technical accomplishment. Perhaps the oldest and the most complete set of Kanaanite alphabet in the world was discovered here.
- 3 The ruins of Ain Daraa, in the north, date to 1000 B.C. and the stone and animal designs are of rare quality.

B. CLASSICAL PERIODS

1 - The ruins of the city of Palmayra (Tadmur).

- from the second and third centuries A.D., are the most famous in the world because of the variety and beauty of their buildings.
- 2 The mins of the city of Afamia, in the Oranies Valley, northwest of Hama, are similar to remains of cities from Roman and Byzontine ages.
- 3 In the ruins of the city of (Busra) are the most complete remains in the world of a Roman amphitheatre.
- 4 The castle of Simoon contains the important churches built in memory of St. John the Boptist in the sixth century A.D.

C. HISTORICAL SITES FROM THE MOSLEM ARABS' PERIOD

The most important of these are found in the big cities of Damascus, Aleppo, Hama, Busra, and in the temples of Jabo, Ateek, Chiraz and Najem.

The most important monument in Damascus is the Omayyad Mosque, which is considered an architectural masterpiece, and unique in its design and ceramic wail decorations. The mosque was built in A.D. 705.

Other important historic monuments found in Damascus are the Tekieh Suleimania, dating from the Ottoman Empire (16th century A.D.), the temple of Domascus, which is one of the best thirteenth century military constructions, and the museum. The museum is divided into four wings, and contains collections from all periods of antiquity. The first wing is the ancient history wing. and there one can see the oldest alphabet ever found; the second wing contains collections from the Classical-Roman and Romon-Byzantine periods; the third wing contains collections from the Arab Mosiem periods, and the fourth wing deals with modern-contemporary history.

The beauty of the display and the rare quality of the collection of historic and artistic treasures make this museum truly unique. Damascus has also a museum of traditional costumes and handcrafts called Al-Azzem Palace.

Among the major tourist attractions in Damascus are the "straight street," and the churches of St. John and St. Paul. The old "souks" of Damascus have a wide variety of merchandise of all kinds, especially textiles such as brocade and damsku. In addition, there are many monasteries. churches, mosques, khans and gates.

In a suburb of Damascus lies the tomb of Zeinab, the dome of which is famous for its gold decoration, and for the fact that this was where the vision appeared to St. Paul. The historical village of Malgula is wellknown for the oldest church in Christianity. In the monastery of Said Noya one can see an icon of the Virgin Mary painted by S:.

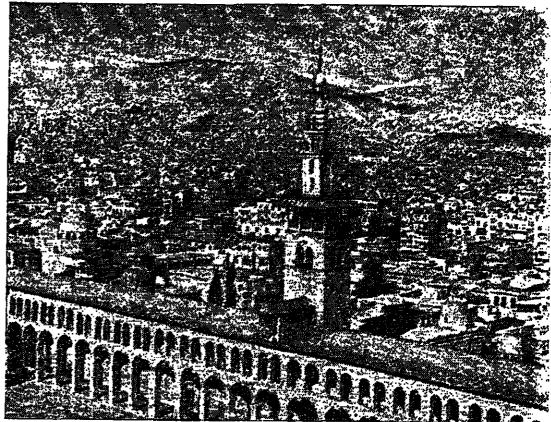

The old city of Aleppo owes its historical prominence to the role it played in civilization, trade, and industry, as well as to its famous castle, which is of scientific value. It was once said about the museum in Aleppo: "If Aleppo had nothing of tourist attraction other than the museum, this alone deserves the visit of a great number of archaeology lovers." The "souks" of Aleppo have α special Oriental magic, and there is in Aleppo, a historic monastery and the church of the Almond Heart.

In Homos is a church which contains the belt of the Virgin Mary, and a mosque containing the tomb of the Arab Moslem leader Khalid Ben Al-Waleed. Also in the district of Homos is the famous (Krak du Chevalier), which is one of the largest and most complete military castles of the Middle Ages.

The city of Hama has the beautiful Al-Athm Palace waterwheels and fountains all along the Orantes river.

One of the ancient remains in Tartous is a cathedral which has been transformed into a museum. In Amreet, near Tartous, there are very rare warship ruins that date back to the fifth century B.C. Tartous is also famous for its sight-seeing vistas and for its beautiful beaches.

Off the coast of Tortous lies the famous Ir-

The Money Men Gather

Which began Friday, marks the end of his cautious reconnaissance of the inflation, Now the new administration has to lay out a coherent and persuasive policy to deal with it, and that is apparently what the President intends to begin doing. Mainly by coincidence, the annual meetings of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund will get under way in Washington this weekend just as the domestic summit ends. There is an instructive symbolism in this accident of timing, for it brings financial and economic officials from around the world to Washington to hear for themselves America's emerging purposes and to respond to them. These meetings bring here the people who bear the responsibility for seeing that their countries can finance their growing international trade. They bring here the people who speak for the poor countries, which desperately need stable prices and loans to push forward development programs. For all of these people, but particularly for those from the poorest nations, the questions now are urgent and the answers, so far as they can be foreseen, are unattractive.

The last meeting of the World Bank and the IMF here in Washington, only two years ago, was in circumstances so different as to seem decades past. There was very little sense of the magnitude of the changes that were about to overtake us. The United States had abandoned the gold standard a year earlier, and the great question was how to make fixed exchange rates work without gold. The answer was that they did not work. This answer was achieved, not by international agreement, but by disagreement. One by one, the major trading nations floated their currencies and the present system evolved not by design or negotiations, but by individual nations' unflateral action to protect themselves. The present evidence suggests that the current issues are going to be settled the same way. If that is true, at least there is hope in the realization that floating rates have worked out

Two years ago, the United States had devalued its dollar once, but had no idea that there were further devaluations to come. Two years ago, the U.S. inflation rate was at a modest level, with prices held firmly down by controls. Now we know that we were only postponing much of the trouble. We also know that the dollar devaluation contributed more to inflation in the United States than anyone anticipated then. Two years ago, America had just been through the Soviet grain sale. It was controversial, but the dispute was mainly over the export subsidies that the United States had paid to the Russians. It only slowly dawned on Americans that the consequences of running down their traditional grain reserves would show up powerfully in the inflation of food prices. Two years ago, oil prices were beginning to move up a little but the main thrust of U.S.

President Ford's economic summit meeting, national oil policy was still to keep a glut of cheap foreign oil from drowning its domestic producers. It was only at the end of the autumn of 1972 that the first shortages of natural gas and heating oil appeared in America. We have all learned a lot of economics over these past two years since the World Bank and the IMF were last here. And the cost of that education has been a good deal more than we bargained for.

The annual bank and fund meetings are welcome to Washington-if we can say that without being suspected of sarcasm. They come to give evidence that the United States is now, more than ever before in its history. tied to the rest of the world in the movement of its economy. President Ford's ability to make national economic policy is now more sharply constrained by international develcoments than that of any previous president. Conversely, when he makes decisions for the United States he is also making them for the people representing other governments in the deliberations at the bank and

If the sense of emergency is much stronger now than two years ago, it is also true that the pitfalls before Americans ought to be more readily visible. President Ford, earlier this week, told the oil exporting countries in stern and explicit terms that their price policy is creating an intolerable degree of disruption. Now the administration seems to be retreating a little, with anxious efforts to assure its listeners that the President is not as determined as he sounded. To withdraw any part of this warning would be a great mistake. It was not a threat of military force. To the contrary, it was a warning that great economic turbulence will jeopardize the wealth of small, newly rich countries first of all,

But it would also be a great mistake for the industrial countries, particularly the United States, to ascribe all of their troubles to oil prices. The inflation began long before the moswing in oil costs. The commodity boom was long under way-in foods, in metals, in fibers-before 1973, when the oil prices took off. Because the tension over oil prices is dramatic and because it lends itself to national, and nationalistic, purposes, there is a rising tendency to give it even more weight than the great weight it deserves in current economic policy.

Finally, it would be a great mistake, and a great discredit to the United States, to preset the unhappy truth that it is the poor nations that suffer most in bad times. Vast swings in basic commodity prices, soaring interest rates and interruptions of world commerce are painful enough for America. But it is anguishing for the countries that live on the ragged edge of survival. The point has more to do with morality than economic self-interest, perhaps. But it has never been entirely clear where one ends and the other begins.

worthwhile example of meaningful action to guard against the disastrous implications of escalating oil prices.

Without threat or bluster, the French Cabinet has mandated a flat ceiling on national spending for oil imports. At present price levels, this action would reduce the volume of oil imported into France by about 10 per cent next year, and thereby force widespread measures to reduce consumption,

Even as President Ford and Secretary of State Kissinger warn the oil-producing states of the risks they are creating for themselves and the world by maintaining their sharply increased prices, other American officials helplessly explain that there is little the United States can do, at least in the short run, except pay the bill.

This simply is not so. What is so is that none of the corrective measures will be easy; they will require national efforts at energy consumption that will hit every American household store and factory. They will require a display of leadership from the highest level of the government, going far beyond hand-wringing and jawboning.

The United States is now said to be importing about 36 per cent of its petroleum needs. Largely because of the fourfold price hike the oil-producing cartel has imposed over the last year or so, America experienced

> The foreign and finance ministers of the major Western nations are meeting in Camp David this weekend to try broadening the coordination among oil consumers that has shown its tentative first stirrings. The dramatic French initiative makes it particularly important that the United States provide convincing evidence at Camp David of its readiness to cooperate in both shortrange and long-range programs to meet the energy challenge.

> What is needed immediately is a clear explanation from President Ford, ideally in the context of the U.S. economic summit discussions, that the energy crisis is not over, and will not be over for some years to come-no matter what happens.

> The American people showed a commendable willingness to respond in their daily life habits last winter when the Arab oil embargo made the energy threat believable. The threat now is not a shortage of supply as it was then; it is that the current drain of wealth and power to the oil cartel threatens a breakdown of world stability. There is every reason to expect a similar willingness to conserve fuel now, once the society is jarred out of its sense of false security.

On the Nation's Memory

By James Reston

WASHINGTON—Partly as a result of former President Nixon's illness, the Senate of the United States is now acting quickly to give the government control over his tape recordings and other official documents, which could be destroyed under the Ford-Nixon agreement in the event of Nixon's death

This is a delicate and even painful subject, but it is impor-tant to the historical record and therefore the memory of the nation. Also, these tapes and papers are vital to the men on trial in the Watergate and related cases, and to the Congress which is studying legislation to prevent the abuses that led to the Watergate scandals.

Without reference to the Congress, the Ford administration on Sept. 8, 1974, agreed that all maas President should be regarded as his personal property, with certain qualifications accepted by

Under the terms of the agree ment, the former President stated that he would donate a substantial portion of these materials to the federal government at some point in the future. Other provisions of the Ford-Nixon agree-

 Nixon would control access to the materials; any requests for access to them, whether by court subpoens or other legal process, must be referred to him.

· Nixon has the right to withdraw any materials (except tape recordings) from deposit, after three years from the date of the agreement, for any purpose. As the report of the Senate subcommittee of the Committee on Government Operations states. presumably this right to withdraw also encompasses the right to destroy any papers or materials he wishes.

• In a separate provision, Nixon agreed to donate tape recordings to the federal government on Sept. I, 1979. This agreement states, however, that this future gift is subject to the condition that all tapes in the government's custody "shall be destroyed at the time of Mr. Nixon's death or on Sept. 1, 1984, whichever event shall first occur."

• Finally, the agreement provides that, in any event, Nixon can direct the administrator to destroy any tapes Nixon chooses after the gift becomes effective in the Government Operations subcommittee has now voted 9-0 for a bill that would (1) "Protect and preserve the tape recordings of conversations and other materials prepared ... between Jan. 20, 1969, and Aug. 9, 1974 ... (2) Make them available for use by the Watergate special prosecution force and for access by the public under regulations promulgated by the administrator of General Services, who would retain custody and control of such tapes Make them available to Richard M. Nixon, or his designees, for copying or any other purpose consistent with the administrator's

In order to change these terms

It should be clear what this bill (S-4016) does not attempt to do. It does not pass judgment on the question of "ownership" of the tapes and documents. Nor does it try to define new regulations for handling presidential papers in the future. This is a special bill to deal with the special and unusual circumstances of the Nixon documents to preserve the evidence therein the courts and Congress, and to secure the record of this extraordinary series of events for future generations.

Mansfield's Bill

The indications are that Sen, Mike Mansfield, who introduced the original bill, will call it up for a vote within the next couple of weeks and that it will be pass-ed. The question then will be whether President Ford will sign it, thereby wiping out his original deal with Nixon.

Even if he vetoed it the chances are that Congress would pass it over the veto, for even many members who agreed with Ford's pardon of Nixon, are outraged by the thought that the key records of these past five historic years could be mutiliated or destroyed by Nixon or his heirs,

Because of the urgency of the question, the present Senate bill may have to be amended to pro-

Buckley's friends in Chile now! It seems to me that the American government never misses an opportunity to betray the ideals of the American people. In my mind the American people may well be closer to the North Vistnamese than to the corrupt society of South Vietnam, closer to Allende than to Pinochet and closer to Castro than to Batista. Why then not just look for ways to cooperate, help and avoid hardships? Given another War of Independence, the American government would have the CIA working for the British.

In the last few days, the bill has been changed to assure that no documents should be released if (A) The Watergate prosecutor certifies that disclosure would impair an individual's right to a fair and impartial trial; or (B) If a court of competent jurisdiction finds that disclosure would be prejudicial

What the Senate is doing here, in effect, is to insist on the government's right of eminent domain, and even if the courts were to hold that Nixon had property rights to the tapes and other documents, provision is made in the bill to pay fair value for the material and retain it in the government's poss

Thus, the bill is not denying Nixon access to the tanes and documents, but merely taking them into "protective custody" and insisting that he should not deny access to others in the will scarcely believe the contents of this strange epoch in our history, even if they have the documents before them.

Farm Crisis Reopens Paris-Bonn Wounds

By James Goldsborough

der if any kind of ordinary negotiation in Europe isn't just a pretext for outbursts of latent

The facts are these: West Germany, an agriculture importing nation, is niggling over the 5 per cent price increases worked out in Brussels last week. Bonn has been upset for years over farm surpluses and rising prices, and it took "hig mouth Helmut [Schmidt] with his legendary vigor to pound the table," as L'Aurore put it.

France, the European community's largest farm exporter, likes farm prices to go up. It keeps farmers from dumping their artichokes in front of local mairies, helps pay for imports from industrial countries like West Germany and keeps the farm vote from wandering leftward.

Fragile Fabric

These conflicting interests bring about negotiation and compromise, except that in Europe this process is called crists. Every time it happens the seams that hold the fragile European fabric together are revealed. Le Monde, on Thursday, published an entire page devoted to 17 years of farm. crises and ending with the Iscomic entry: "Sept. 25, 1974. Bonn refuses the 5 per cent increase in agriculture prices."

For much of the French press, the West German Cabinet's communiqué Wednesday was a Dational insult. Le Figaro called it a new Ems telegram, and there were visions of troops mobilizing as they did following Bismarck's doctoring of the Ems telegram Kaiser William I sent to Napoleon III in 1870, which nettled French pride and brought on a war.

.Mr. Schmidt called President Giscard d'Estaing on Thursday morning to straighten things out set for next Wednesday in Brussels. Schmidt had told Giscard. several times recently that the time had come to revise the Community's farm policy, but he must have been shocked Thursday morning when he learned of the French press reaction.

Though plenty of people could be found around Europe yesterday to criticize the West Gerfortunately worded and some wondered if it was even possible to do what was being asked-the reaction here was overly strong. A random press sampling turned up: "diktat," "ultimatum," "knife at the throat," "low blow," "bigmouth Helmut" and a "kick in

Element of Emotion

Giscard's dinner party, the blossoming Schmidt-Giscard relationbetween Paris and Bonn palaces. all was forgotten in the wave of indignation that swept across France. This diplomatic suspicion, based on Bonn's negative attitude on such diverse projects as regional aid, aid to developing countries, community loans, energy policy and farm policy, is being fed to the French press, and the press gives it the emotional content. There is, however, evidence to back up the French suspictors. The West Germans say it is not that Schmidt wants to break up the community, but that he wants to get things done.

West German sources also point out that many of these community projects would draw most heavily on deutsche marks, but that is not being completely fair, in farm policy at least. The basic quid pro quo between France and West Germany in setting up the EEC 17 years ago was that France would open its historically protected borders to West German industry, and the West Germans, in turn, would be fed by France.

Strong Argument

The French have a strong argument when they say that now is no time to cut back on farm production. If there are a few surpluses in the community, most expert opinion today says the world is entering a period of food penury. If Bonn doesn't like stocking the surpluses, there are plenty of countries to which that food could be sent. Schridt's Germany is not Brandt's.

And that is felt here. And that is lest here a Hi Monde calls Schmidt the 15 Gio-"Iron Chancellor." "The time Inkneeling before the Warsaw morkon ument is over." Even Branchog loses some of his idealism if on ce. can believe a quote attributed tog him in Thursday's France-Soir. Brandt allegedly told François and another farm meeting was Mitterrand a few months before leaving office that he was "the last North German who will accept the domination of Europe by s Latins and Catholics."

French television last week made a monumental effort to explain modern West Germany to Frenchmen. In two 75-minute documentaries shown on prime time the Germans were shown as though it had just been dis-

Ford and the Flanigan Blunder

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON.—That Republicans will have to undergo ssary, embarrassing and inescapably messy hearings next week on the nomination of Peter Flanigan as ambassador to Spain can be traced to two increasingly familiar shortcomings by President Ford: paying too much attention to continuity with the Nixon presidency and not enough attention to protection of his party's interests.

Flanigan, former New York financier and White House aide under President Nixon, will not enjoy the perfunctory confirma-tion hearings normally conduct-ed by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Sen. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri, leading the attack against the confirmation. wants Flaniern put under oath to answer a long list of accusa-

The most serious by far are sworn accusations by former Nixon attorney Herbert Kalmbach implicating Flanigan in exchang-ing ambassadorial nominations for political contributions. Though denied by Flanigan, Kalmbach's charges are strongly supported by Albert Jenner, who interrogated him as a counsel at the House impeachment proceedings.

No Need

Even if Flanigan is confirmed, it will revive poisonous memories of Watergate one month before the midtern election. Thus, Republican politicians are talking about Flanigan's nomination as the Nixon pardon in microcosm: a politically self-damaging act fulfilling no ostensible need.

Flanigan, a haughty lace-curtain Irish socialite who bruised feelings all over Washington as a Nixon White House troubleshooter, had no visible support for a diplomatic post. High State Department officials, Republican senators and many party leaders agree that the nomination needleggly hormous trouble. There is no sign that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger pashed it, contrary to hints privately dropped by Flanigan.

The best explanation is that Mr. Ford signed an ambassadorial commission for Flanigan prepared during the Nixon administration as part of the new President's obsession with continuity during his first days in office. As with the Nixon pardon, there was little, if any, study of political consemences.

Some of the President's closest advisers were not even aware of last July's testimony by Kalmbach, Nixon's former attorney now serving a federal prison sentence. Kalmbach testified he had been what he told Kalmbach. Although Eagleton today has iew allies in the drive against Flanigan, prospects for confirma-tion are blighted by one ominous fact: Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, assistant Democratic leader and perhaps the single most potent figure in today's Senate, has announced against him. Whether Flanigan survives or not, even White House aides concede the hearings can only embarrass the Republican party and the President at a time when his hands are full with more important matters.

THEATER IN LONDON-'Richard II' as a Duel And as a Comparison

By John Walker

ONDON, Sept. 27 (IHT).—The trapped into compromise of prinpeare Company's production of "Richard II" at the Aldwych suggests a duel. The cast troops onto the stare to stand in two formal lines while, in the benign presence of the author (or, at least, an actor with that domed Shakespearean forehead), Richard Pasco and Ian Richardson step forward to hold between them a crown. One relinquishes to the other with a smile and a bow; which depends upon the night, for the two alternate the parts of Richard II and his usurper Bolingbroke. They put on their robes, assume their roles and the action begins.

The end of the play suggests a collaboration. We watch Boling-broke crowned Henry IV and as he turns to reveal a grinning death's head—for civil war was to follow-by a cunning substitution, there stand Mr. Pasco and Mr. Richardson, actors once more and hand in hand, to take their bows. This frame for the play is more than a gimmick, as is the alternate casting of these two actors. For the director, John Barton, has found within the text not only the fruitful metaphor of acting with both king and challenger consciou; of playing fixed roles-but also a course of action in which Bolingbroke becomes a substitute for Richard, advancing as the other declines, beginning as a man of honor fighting against a ruler who has murdered to secure hir throne and ending as a king who also kills in the purcuit of absolut power. The production, indeed, is consistently brilliant, illuminating the play and restoring to it a power to surprise, particularly in Shakespeare's astonishing insights into Richard after his fall, a private man seeking a new identity, and into Bolingbroke, whose tragedy is that of all politicians,

BIRMINGHAM, England, Sept.

B 27 (IET).—Frankfurt was put on the world's ballet map a few years ago by John Neumeier, the who has now moved on to Hamburg and who seems well poised to inherit John Cranko's role as the dominant force in German company is as mixed as his

it is not surprising that the company has not yet developed any distinctive style.

He was succeeded in Prankfurt opening of the Royal Shakes- ciples and using the means to power which he condemned in cihers, conscious of his own corruption.

If much seems modern, the production with its toy horses and gay jousting emphasises the distance from today's world. The characters move in a society that is not only hierarchical but hieratic. Mr. Barton takes advantage of this to create some trementious theatrical images.

It is a pleasure to sit through the play twice and to watch with fascination the changes two fine actors can bring to the same role in the same production. Richard is somewhat out of touch with reality—at one point he enters riding a unicorn. Mr. Pasco makes him almost childish, certainly immature. His Richard goes off to war because he looks handsome in a plumed helmet. Mr. Richardson's Richard is altogether cooler, less impetuous, although as . conscious of his effect on others.

Both actors acquit themselves magnificently. If the play is a duel, then both are the winners. Just as the production emphasises that one is a mirror-image of the other, so there is nothing to choose between them. Of the two combinations, I just preferred King Richardson and Bolingbroke Pasco, but the production is one that is well worth returning to.

At the Soho-Poly, George Byatt's "Kong Lives" is a strange and powerful play, much aided in its impact by excellent direction and three splendid performances. It is, in part, a Marxist critique of mass entertainment and the capitalist society that produces it, a variation on the plot of the film "King Kong" and all those Cinderella stories that pacify the masses, and a study of relationships between a workprofessional and efficient troupe, with enough self-confidence to

At a time when political passion is absent from theater (and from politics for that matter) and when so many play: say nothing worth hearing, it may seem churlish to complain that "Kong Lives" makes too many statements. Mr. Byatt is bursting with ideas and in his desire to express as many of them as possible, the play occasionally becomes a recited essay, didactic in form with the actors lecturing the audience.

These too literary moments apart, it is effective theater. Its original title was "Gracie Fields Betrayed the Working Class," the betrayal being in the way this English entertainer made films in the 1930s, playing a Lancashire millgirl (which Miss Fields once was) who finds happiness by marrying the boss's son, leaving her friends behind to live through the squalor of their everyday, poorly paid existence. Here, in a variation on that theme, Charlie, a sailor, picks up the boss's daughter and brings her back to his home, a Glasgow tenement. Opposed to the symbol of Miss Fields is that of King Kong, an image of the Mammy, Charlie's mother, grieving the death of her husband in the shipyards, quotes critic John Berger to the effect that the art of any period serves the interests of the ruling classes.

The confrontation between her and Fiona, Charlie's well-meaning, complacent giri, provides some electric moments, culminating in Mammy assuming the role of Kong, uncompromisingly violent.

In the cramped Scho-Poly basement, the effect is disturbing. The play has been exceptionally well cast and is excellently acted. Irene Sunters as Mammy brings out the humor of the role as a working-class cineaste and moving as she keens the death of her husband. Cherie Lunghi is perfect as a Fay Wray-styled heroine, beauty opposed to Dou-glas Heard's vacillating beast as Charlie caught in the middle. Frederick Proud's direction is exemplary.

It is a play that gives the lie to Françoise Dorin's "The Turn-

Theatre, which is full if cheap gibes at experimental theater as a place of noncommunication and silly, pointless actions. Yet it has not a tenth of the wit or passion or concern of "Kong Lives."

Mrs. Dorin's play has been a great success in Paris and it may, indeed, be a far funnier boulevard comedy than it seems here, handicapped as it is by a leaden production and dull and some-times had acting, for which the director and the star, David Tomlinson, must take the blame.

He plays a successful writer of light comedies who is horrified to discover that his actual life follows the cliches of his plays with his friends behaving like stock characters and uttering commonplace lines. This commentary on the inadequacies of such plays, contained within a tightly plotted bedroom-farcical example of the genre, ought to be amusing. But no account of the ambiguities of the situation is taken by Mr. Tomlinson. He growls his own lines in a monotone and encourages the rest of the cast to give run-of-the-mill commercial comedy performances that make of the text a nonsense

GENEVA, Sept. 27 (IHT).—The ed its season with a production of Berlioz's "Les Troyens" that matches the grandeur and unity of the composer's conception and drives yet another nail in the coffin of all the shusive editions of the past.

What is involved here is another in the still small number of substantially complete performances, in one evening, based on the "New Bertioz Edition" of the Bärenreiter publishing house, is-sued five years ago. British and American companies have led the way, but Geneva claims the Con-tinental first. What is more to the point is that it is the first theater in a French-language city to treat this work with such respect—Paris had a rich op-portunity in 1969, but instead adhered to the bad old French Berlioz tradition, with disastrous

American Conductor

John Nelson, the young American conductor of the series of performances that ended last night, came here with handsome credentials-he prepared the chorus for the New York Met's production last season under Rafael Kubelick, and made his Met debut as a conductor when Kubelick became ill. And Kubelick himself was responsible for the 1957 Covent Garden production that began the real comean opera conductor of formidable poise. He had the drive and flamboyance for the heroic Berlioz, the feeling for the equally important tender and passionate scenes, and the instinct for smoothly shifting gears between the two. Now and then the chorus had to scramble to keep up, and at crucial times more assertiveness from the brass and woodwinds of the Suisse Romande Orchestra would have helped, but account of the fertile and ver-dant nature of Dido's country that is reflected so richly in the music. This was left mainly to Jarmila Konecna's exotic costumes. The one exception to this was the difficult Royal Hunt and Storm scene, handled with projections in a kaleidoscopic, almost psychedelic way, with the dancers impersonating the satyrs and other woodsy denizens.

Jean-Claude Riber, the theater's director and the stage director for the production, moved both his masses and principals effectively within Svoboda's stage frame. He did not always avoid routine, particularly in the choral movements, but he very often achieved majestic effects, particularly in the mass suicide of the Trojan women that ends the first part of the opera, and again in the ritualized yet intensely human death of Dido that ends

Included in the same sale, some French furniture sold rather well, proving again that in times of crisis usable objects fare far bet-ter than objects of decorative function. A pair of very finely carved bergires chairs with upholstered arms of the Napoleonic period, around 1800-1805—went up to 11,977 francs. Their curving backs still had an 18thcentury feel. In view of the current disaffection for this period, that was not a bad price. The same is true of a small, very elegant secretaire with front drop-leaf and two doors in the lower part. The mahogany-ventured place, 140 centimeters high and 78 centimeters wide, was of the kind so fashionable at the time when the style angless was riding the crest. BRUSSELS ART

To Enlighten and to Entertain

By Rona Dobson

BRUSSELS, Sept. 27 (IHT).— Marcel Broodthsers, the unclassifiable Brussels-born artist with a solid international reputation, starts off the season at Brussels' Palais des Beaux Arts. Awarded the Robert Giron Prize, which gave him the right to a one-man show, he has elected to share his opportunity and the opening show has been expanded to include other artists working in contemporary idiom.

Environmental art, narrative art, photography, video tapes, recordings, films, have all been assembled to enlighten and, one hopes, to entertain the Brussels art public. Reactions will certainly be mixed but at least it's all there for the sampling.

The show opened today and will continue until Nov. 3. Lack of a modern art museum with scope and facilities to mount shows that illustrate and present trends, movements and methods has deprived both the public and Belgian artists of a window on a wider art world.

The Palais des Beaux Arts, a private enterprise run by a com-mittee which appoints a direction of exhibitions to organize the art programs, has the funds to the void with regular showings of current international art which might otherwise never get an airing in Brussels.

"But we are not a museum the newly appointed director, art writer Karel Geirlandt from Ghent, stresses, "We have no permanent collection, Everything we show is only transient. This in itself is no handicap; it eliminates the temptation to drag out old faithfuls from storage, re-hang them in new sequence and produce a new title to freshen them up. Mr. Geirlandt plans ambitious programs. "We want to provide good European contemporary art as a counter-current to the wave of art from America spreading over Europe now," he says. While acknowledging the stimulus and vitality of art activity in the United States, he feels there's a lot going in Europe that deserves an equal share of attention

In the present show, both currents meet. Broodthaers and Dan Van Severen are Belgian, two of the seven narrative art exponents are French. The other five are American, and American environmental artist Robert Ryman was invited over from New York to create a series for the show here. Broodthaers concocts compositions out of mussel shells, egg shells, old suitcases; his predilec-tion for palm trees is given full rein with a potted forest of green fronds. Everything he does is imbued with imaginative fantasy. a sense of humor, a feel for building form and a kind of order out of unlikely materials. Words. letters, childish drawings, old prints of exotic animals, lumps coal, are all grist to his mill.

Prelude Seen To Take-Over Of Franklin

N.Y. Fed's Action Said to Clear Way

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 (Reuters).—The foreign-exchange ar-rangement between Franklin National Eank and the New York Federal Reserve Bank announced yesterday is seen by banking sources here as a "significant" step in the "tidying-up" of the bank prior to take over.

Under the unprecedented arrangement, the New York Fed will assume Franklin's outstanding foreign exchange contracts. valued at some $800 million. Sources said this deal removes the major obstacle which has stood in the way of a take-over-since the troubles at the bank were made public in late May.

Franklin was finding it impos-sible to cover its forward con-tracts following the announcement of its troubles, themselves at-tributed to unauthorized dealings, and none of the possible suffers was willing to assume the thability, the sources said.

They said that any profits which accrue, and go to Franklin, are likely to be used to reduce its $1.4 billion debt to the Federal Reserve System.

The position of Michèle Sindona, Franklin's major shareholder, since his resignation as a director, continues uncertain. However, he will not have to make good his guarantee to underwrite a proposed rights issue as it is implicit that the rights issue will not be made. In a related development today Fasco inc., part of Mr. Sindona's personal holding company, sold its 53 per cent interest in Talcott National Corp. to Stan-dard Prudential at $3.50 per share, subject to Federal Reserve

Working Hours Being Reduced At Snia Viscosa

MILAN, Sept. 27 (AP-DJ),-Snia Viscosa, the big Italian textile company, will cut working hours for 2,000 workers starting next week as a result of lower sales, company sources reported today.

Sources disclosed that the 2,000 workers, in the Snia Viscosa factory of Varedo will work from 24 to 32 hours a week instead of the scheduled 40.

Unions protested the decision and called a strike for next week.

A strike was also scheduled next week at Borletti, a top manufacturer of speedometers and other precision instruments, to protest the cut to 32 hours a week in the schedule of 2,500 workers.

Snia Viscosa employs 24,000 workers in its Italian factories chiefly producing artificial fibers. Borletti manpower totals 5.000.

Decline Erases Gain Of Past Two Weeks

NEW YORK, Sept. 37 (IHT).— The Dow Jones industrial average slumped again today, hitting a 12-year low—the same level it was at two weeks ago before a brief rebound.

The index closed at 621.95, down 16.03. The last time it closed lower was on Nov. 9, 1962, when it finished the session a:

Declining issues outnumbered gains by about 970 to 270 as volume totaled a molles: 12.23 million shares compared with 9.06 million yeste day when the Yom Kippur holiday reduced trading.

Analysis generally regard the brief recovery frem a 12-year low on Sept. 13 as a typical rebound from severe losses. They say the investing community is basically weary of uncontrolled inflation and a weakening economy with no solution in sight.

They note also that most major banks have been reluctant to follow a prime-rate cut to 11 3.4 from 12 per cent set this week by Morgan Guaranty Trust and Chase Manhattan Bank. Wall Street's pessimism prompted widespread selling and leading institutions liquidated some of their bank holdings. The American Stock Exchange index closed at 64.13, down 8.79.

The most active issue was Syntex, closing at 31 1.4, off 1 5.8, on volume of 36,700 shares. Fast - moving developments in the money markets dominated the debt sector again this week.

with bonds again taking a back Continuing, but unfounded, speculation over a further locsening of the monetary reins sent most interest rates tumbling. Broad declines were seen in a variety of posted paper rates, with some sectors dropping a full 100 basis points on a Friday to Friday basis.

The three-month bill which was performing almost in a vacuum, firmed steadily through most of the week, closed at 6.14 per cent bid, no offer against Monday's auction average of 7 per cent. A more representative showing

At their pre-1971 highs, the average price per share for any ONE of these stocks worked out to about $50.

Today, you could buy shares of ALL 15 for about $50. Their average price per share is less than $3.35 (Value Line Investment Survey 9/6/74).

But the foregoing is just a statistical comparison-NOT a suggested course of action. We present this exhibit simply as symptomatic of the unusual situations taking shape in today's deeply depressed stock market.

What about all those Stocks at $2, $3, $4.

Of the more than 1500 stocks (most of them on the NYSE) under continuous review by The Value Line Investment Survey, currently (as of .9/6/74) we find that ...

. . 259 of these stocks are under $5-with 114 down below $3. (In the dismal year of 1970, just 61 of the Value Line 1500 sank below $5; the subsequent recovery gains of all 61 -from their 1970 lows to their 1971-73 highs ---averaged more than +300%.)

... of the 259 stocks now under $5, only 39 are rated favorably by Value Line for their Probable Market Performance in the Next 12 Months relative to all the others; 97 are rated unfavorably and should, we think, be completely avoided; the rest are rated average.

(While not every stock will always perform in accordance with its Value Line rating, such a large majority have in the past that we believe you can weigh the odds heavily in your favor by checking your investments against these ratings.)

NOTE: Many of the stocks-under-$5 cited above are relatively volatile. They can be expected to outswing the market not only going up but also going down.

Get Ready Now.

Value Line believes that today's market is more deeply undervalued than at any time since 1949. (The Value Line Average of more than 1500 stocks is at its lowest point ever since its establishment in 1961.)

When a major market recovery really takes hold, it is likely to move with considerable speed. Now, we believe, is the time to get ready. To help you do so, we invite you to accept the following special offer:

IN a sense, the witty title of grows faintly tedious after a Iris Murdoch's 16th and latest while. Providing one regards it novel. "The Sacred and Profane Love Machine," refers to the book itself. For in many ways this novel is a machine. The story it tells—about an English psychi-atrist named Blaise Gavender who loves women equally (his wife, for whom his passion is sacred, and his mistress, for whom his desire is profane) and who has fathered sons by each of them (one sacred and one profane, naturally)seems to have been designed as much for its absurd symmetry as for its power to engage our empathy. The sequence of its incidents appears to have been planned by a computer, with each successive scene designed to bring together the two characters most unlikely to be together at that point. And the incidents themselves—at one significant point, the psychiatrist is attacked by his wife's dogs at another, the wife wanders into a massacre that happens to be taking place in a German airport—seem often to

And as long as one regards Miss Murdoch's novel passively, it is not altogether satisfying. Up to a point, one can sympathize with Blaise Gavender, who married into the comfort of Harriet Derwent because he had given up hope of finding his ideal, and then discovered in Emily McHugh that very ideal. But there are limits to one's patience with his dilemma, And when Harriet after learning about Emily and her child, forgives Blaise and attempts to share him with his other "family". . . when Blaise, discovering his preference for Emily, moves in with her and tries to set up Harriet as his mistress. . . when Harriet rebels against this and tries to run off with Emily's child. . . the limits of one's pa-

occur for no other reason than to occur.

Why must the three corners of this love triangle carry on so endlessly about their consciences, their sense of sin. their obligations to do right? Why can't they simply do the decent modern thing, and arrange for altmony and visiting rights? Why has Miss Murdoch written herself into a corner where she must resolve her characters' dilemma with random dog attacks and airport massacres? And why the sudden shift in focus to the night of the Gavenders' next-door neighbor, Montague Small, a blocked detective story writer who is grieving for his recently deceased wife and fending off the affections of an Oxford classicist

while. Providing one regards it passively.

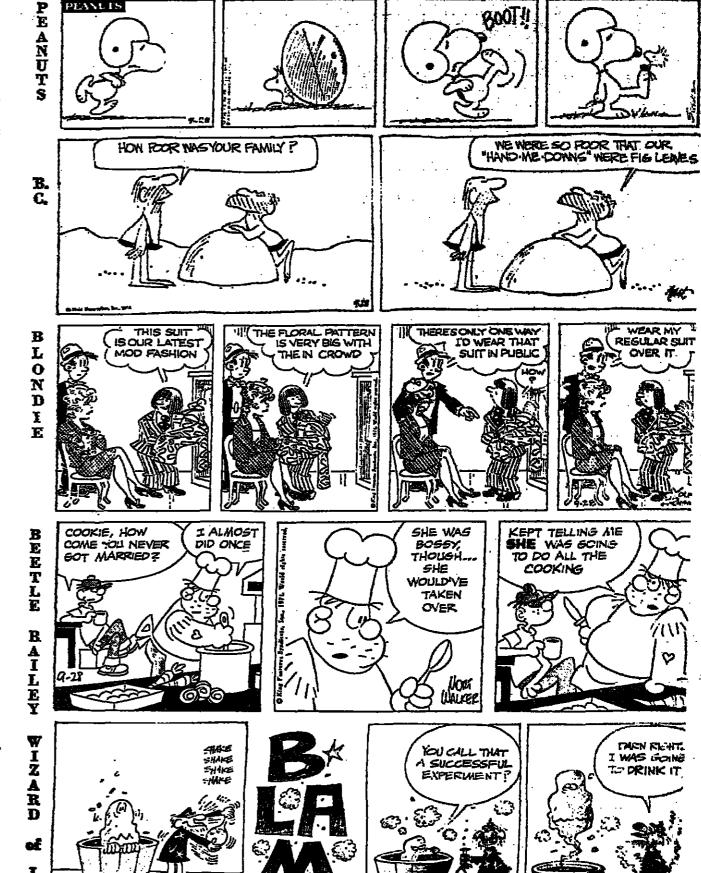

But of course one can no more regard Iris Murdoch passively than one can look at a machine without questioning what it's designed to do. And everywhere in this novel one is bound to notice clues to what Miss Murdoch's new machine is doing. There are the dreams the various characters keep having-dreams full of Freudian footnotes and beasts from earlier mythologies. There are the classical references Miss Murdoch keeps inserting which doubtless add up to a coherent message of their own if one takes the trouble and erudition to work them out (one might start with the fact that a dog named Ajax cripples Blaise by severing the tendon in the back of his ankle). There are religious leitmotifs, references to medieval art, allu-sions to philosophy (Is it ironic that Miss Murdoch's hero has the same first name as the philos-opher who believed in curbing the passions and submitting to God?). A charwoman named Constance Pinn keeps changing character throughout the story until at the end she emerges as a sort of goddess of love. David, the product of Blaise's sacred love, is a "fastidious" youth who is obsessed with Jesus Christ, Luca, the illegitimate child, is subnormal and gets along with the dogs who attack Blaise.

What does it all add up to? What is the machine doing? After a single, somewhat superficial reading, it is difficult to say. Blaise ends up with his "profane" love, Emily McHugh, and is happy enough after having been force, to make his choice. On the other hand, the character who gets the curtain lines, not to speak of the promise of affection from three highly sexual women, is Edgar Demarnay, the Oxford classicist whose love for Montague Small never descends 'to profamity. Maybe :: can figure out the permutations. I can't.

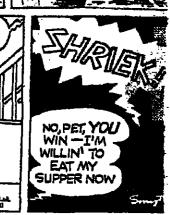

But be assured of this: Miss Murdoch's novel is amusing enough not to require solutions. When it ceases to amuse, it begins to shock. When it ceases to shock, it begins to puzzle. And when it ceases to puzzle, God only knows. In short, this is another novel only Iris Murdoch could have written—a sacred and profane love machine that somehow works.

Mτ. Lehmann-Haupt is a New named Edgar Demarnay? It all York Times book reviewer.

at this time, the Mets are in a pennant race. But since they're not the ones who can profit from it, they couldn't have been too upset at what Al Oliver and Willie Stargell did to them last

What Oliver and Stargell did was pummel the Mets into an 11-5 surrender to Pittsburgh. With six games remaining the Pirates and Cardinals each had 83 victories and 73 defeats. The Pirates have three games left with the Mets and three with Chicago.

Oliver collected five hits, including a pair of two-run homers. and drove in five runs. Stargell contributed a homer and a single and knocked in four runs.

Pep Talk The explosion came after manager Danny Murtaugh held a one-minute pregame chibhouse meeting and told his players to forget the previous night's en-counter with the Cardinals. The Phates had scored three runs in the top of the 11th only to have

St. Louis score four runs in the last half of the inning. The manager's advice obviously was well heeded. "A game like that can affect players differently," said Oliver, who drove in four runs against St. Louis. "Some players might have been down, but our team is confident we can

Dodgers 5, Padres 2

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 27 (UPI),-Ron Cey hit a two-run, two-out double in the 10th inning last night to break up a 2-2 tie and give Los Angeles a 5-2 victory over the San Diego Padres, reducing the Dodgers' magic number to two, with five games remaining.

Cey's double came with Jimmy Wynn and Joe Ferguson on via walks. Bill Russell followed Cey's two-bagger with a run-scoring single to cap the three-run in-

Reds 10, Astros 6

At Cincinnati, Ken Griffey got four straight hits and the Reds, erupting for five runs in the fifth inning came from behind to outslug Houston, 10-6.

A's 2. Twins 1

In the American League, at Oakland, Jim (Catfish) Hunter, hidding for the first Cy Young Award of his career, pitched the A's to an assured tie for their fourth straight American League West title by stopping Minne-sota, 2-1. The Oakland victory, coupled with the doubleheader loss by Texas, to Chicago, reduced the A's magic number for a division championship to one and also eliminated the third-place Twins from the race.

White Sox 5, Rangers 1

White Sox 7, Rangers 2 At Arlington, Jim Kaat became a 30-game winner for the second time as Chicago swept a double-beader from Texas, 5-1 and 7-2.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 3 At - Detroit, Bob Montgomery lined a two-run single in the 10th inning, enabling Boston to keep its flickering American League Eastern Division hopes burning with a 5-8 victory over the Tigers.

Blazers Defeat Chicago, 29-0, in World Football

ORLANDO, Fla., Sept. 27 (UPI).-Normally cautious Bob Davis tossed three touchdown passes last night and led the Florida Blazers to a 29-0 victory over the Chicago Fire in the World Football League. The Florida quarterback, who spent seven years in the NFL playing behind Joe Namath and Archie Manning, found a new target in Hubie Bryant, a recent trade from the Detroit Wheel, who caught a 27-yarder for the Blazers' first touchdown early in the first quarter. Gommy Reamon, Florida's leading rusher who was playing against his brother, Charlie, a Chicago defensive back, grabbed a flare pass and ran 12 yards for the Blazers' second score before half time.

The brutal Blazer defense, ranked the best in the league, kept Chicago quarterbacks Virg Carger and Leo Hart bottled up most of the night and corralled the once-great Leroy Kelly, who was running in place of injured Mark Keller. The Blazers, who didn't get Yankees Prepare for 5 Victories...

By Joseph Durso

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 (NYT). — We've got to win every game, it's our only chance," manager Bill Virdon said yesterday as he led his New York Yankees to Cleveland for the final five games of the team's most dramatic shot at a pennant in 10 years.

The Yankees flew West for three games against the Indians, starting tonignt, and two against the Milwaukee Brewers starting Tuesday night, and the arithmetic was strict: they were half a came behind the Baltimore Orioles, who have six games.

"Our pitching is set for all five games," Virdon said, indicating he had no tricks up his sleeve. "Pat Dobson, Rudy May, Larry Gurs, Doc Medich and Pat Dob-

The Yankees prepared for the final push with no illusions. They had won 20 of their last 30 games, had helped to shatter the Boston Red Sox, but had lost five times in the last nine days to Boston and Baltimore and also had lost a 2 1 2-game lead in the Eastern Division.

The Orioles, meanwhile, had been winning 22 of their last 23 games in a dazzling stretch drive that threatened to foil the Yankees' bid for the championship, In the opener tonight, Dobson will be trying for his 13th victory of the season and will be opposed by Fritz Peterson, who was traded to Cleveland earlier this season after eight years in New York. afternoon, May will confront Gayto field a throw during game in Boston. Red Sox won, 5-3. pitches, and Gura will finish the series Sunday against the rookle, Bruce Ellingson.

After that, they will rotate to Medich, the 25-year-old medical student, who kept the Yankees alive Wednesday night in a 10inning, I-0 tingler against the Red Sox.

"I don't know if I have any smiles left," Medich said, forcing a trace of a smile through the tension of the race, "Talk about putting it on the line. Next time I pitch, I'll be going for my 20th win and we'll be going for the pennant." Medich stayed in contention for both goals by winning No. 19 alter two straight defeats, but he had to outlast Bill Lee and the belatedly aroused Red Sox to do it. Both pitchers allowed seven hits, neither team made any errors and the game finally was decided on a walk, a bunt and

BALTIMORE, Sept. 27 (NYT). -This could be the week that from that—there is no money makes Milwaukee infamous, involved, just pride—the Brewers Starting tonight, the Brewers will engage the first-place Baltimore Orioles in a three-game series here, and then will return home to face the other Eastern Division contender, New York, in two games to end the regular season. Milwaukee is fighting for a fourth-place finish, which would

Destabilizing Newark

WASHINGTON. — Newark has money to burn and it doesn't been a pothole in the poyerty pocket of New Jersey for "You mean the CIA?" Right. What we want to do some time. I went up to talk to the Chamber of Commerce the is have them destabiliza Newark." other night and all the speakers he said.

"You have to be kidding."

"I'm not. The CIA spent $8 million to destablize Allende in Chile. If we could get them to spend that kind of money in Newark we'd be in great shape." "But why would the CIA want to destabilize Newark?" I asked. "It's not a threat to the United

Have you walked around it lately?" he replied.

"Looks are not everything," 1 told him. "You have to do some-thing that would endanger the security of the Western Hemisphere. Allende was a Marxist and we couldn't stand something like that so near North America. "Okay, we'll put out the word that our mayor is a Marxist and then they can send us the aid." "Would your mayor go along with that?"

"He's so desperate for money for the city, he'll go along with

"That's all well and good, but what can I do for you?" "Get word back to Kissinger that Newark is about to recognize Castro's government and is planning to nationalize the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. Have him call a meeting of the 40 Committee and let them recommend that the CIA finance the overthrow of the Newark government. If someone from here tells Kissinger, he won't be-lieve us. But since you're the last foreign correspondent to have visited us, he might believe you. The CIA is our only hope."

"But if the CIA destabilizes you, they would have to destabilize New York, Chicago, Baltimore, and every other city in trouble. They don't have that kind of money."

"How can you be sure?" the man said. "No one knows how much money the CIA has." "Your idea has merit," I admitted, "and I'm willing to pass tt on to Kissinger. But you know the CIA isn't dumb. What makes you think that they would believe that Newark has gone Marxist?"

"What makes you think it in a small house in Los Angeles. won't if we don't get the money."

Bette Davis Is Going on Stage

By William Glover

NEW YORK (AP).—It is as tough as ever to be a woman and it is getting tougher to be an actress, says Bette Davis, who nevertheless is embarking on a stage musical at age 66.

Despite the women's liberation move-ment, "I don't think it's any easier to be a woman today than it ever was," Miss Davis feels. And for that mertia she blames faulty logic. "It's not enough for us to sit around and say men must become different and think of us differently," she says. "It's up to us to make the men think of us differently. The male is the way he is and I don't think this will ever change. I think women have got to change.

"I'm not talking about assertion. I'm talking about facing life more realistically, certainly as regards marriage and how it will not aways be the same. Men are much more wise about that than we are." Miss Davis, who has had four husbands and vows never to marry again, hopes for the day when "woman no longer marries for security—or insists on $10 million if she goes away-and shakes off that old, old-fashioned romantic thing that a marriage must always be romantic." Influenced by Book

She attributes this attitude to "that beautiful book of Germaine Greer (The Female Emuch'), which I wish I could have had years ago."

Miss Davis, whose professional career began 46 years, 84 films and numerous stage roles ago, feels there may be some kind of obscure, backlash link between the general struggle for feminine equality and the diminishing opportunities for the young to become actresses.

"With few exceptions, it's a completely man's script world today," Miss Davis says of the surge of movies centering on just heroes, buddles and gangs.

Which is why she is getting ready for an extended workout in a stage musical, "Miss Moffatt," even though theater runs a poor second to the screen, in her opinion.

"I'm not enamored of the theater as opposed to film, which is the greatest medium for actors," she says. "You know, Spencer Tracy said the theater is for children or idiots." Miss Davis opted for the assignment in preference to "a lot of very bad TV

Some Good Words

"It was just fate that each TV script was increasingly blood, gore, murder and shooting. I've never done films like that, never, never, never. I played people, not violent characters. And the writers don't have time to write good words any more, so I said, 'Well, I'm going to do some good words for a change.'

"Miss Moffatt" is based on "The Corn Is Green," which Miss Davis did on the screen in 1945.

According to director Josh Logan, he and playwright Emlyn Williams initially undertook this adaptation as a vehicle for Mary Martin. However, after her husband, Richard Halliday, died in 1973, Miss Mar-tin's availability became uncertain and then someone remembered the Davis film. The story is about a teacher and a student she inspires to make the most of his abilities. The Welsh locale of the early 1900s was shifted in the new version to the U.S. South and the pupil became a black youth instead of a miner's son. Then a musical score by Albert Hague and lyrics by Mr. Williams were added.

When Miss Davis first read the revision "it was an enormous shock to me and I didn't believe in it at all." She now defends the change with equal vigor.
"Of course, this has nothing to do with racial problems whatsoever," "The play is purely and simply the struggle of a bright, bright boy and this marvelous woman who gives him his life."

Not 'Skeletonized'

The addition of songs and choreography have not damaged the play's emotional fabric either, she says—"It hasn't been skeletonized at all."

Miss Davis has six numbers to sing in the show, and although she never took a voice lesson in her life, "people keep forgetting I've done a lot of singing all A back injury during rehearsals delayed the production and the opening Baltimore engagement of a long cross-country tour had to be canceled. That cost the produc-tion $130,000 in advance ticket sales. The first showing is now scheduled for Phila-delphia on Oct. 4, with arrival on Broad-way set for next fall, her sixth appearance

Miss Davis looks back with nostalgia, liberalty diluted with realism, to the days when Hollywood's big studies prodigally bought stories for its actresses, including Bergman, Colbert, Crawford, Dietrich, Dunne, Garson and, of course, Bette Davis. "I'm not bright enough to know why this has happened," she says of the present shift, then adds: "Well, we women had the industry for 20 years and so I always say when they talk about this sort of thing, we have no complaints."

The Heartbreaker

Since being bypassed for the screen version of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" ("That was my real heartbreaker"), she has gotten a proposal to shoot Ibsen's "Ghosts" in Norway. It was a challenge that fell through because "the British film industry is worse off even than Hollywood."

Although her heart belongs to movies Miss Davis voices no reservations about this "really exhausting profession" of stage-

"Like it or not, one should get to love theater," she says. "Because I must work some of the time. Everybody must for the good of their heads. I'll always be busy."

PEOPLE: Brigitte Bardot Is Turning 40

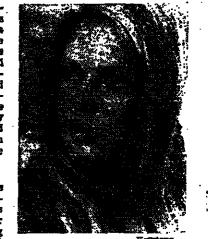

Brigitte Bardot turns 40 Saturday and hordes of photographers are expected to besiege her villa in Saint-Tropez, France, so she is likely to forgo her daily topless dip in the Mediterranean and stay inside with her latest boyfriend, Laurent Verges, 28, and her usual retinue of dogs, a don-key and turtles. As if to prove that turning 40 doesn't necessarily change much, the actress posed mude for several photographs in this week's issue of the magazine Paris-Match.

Warner Paperback Library has purchased the paperback publica-tion rights to Richard Nizon's memoirs, according to the former president's literary agent, Irving Lazar, "We shook hands that they will be the publishers, and they will be," Issar said Thursday in New York. He declined to say how much Warner would pay for the rights, adding that Nixon's earnings would "depend on the kind of book he writes. If he writes an interesting book, I think it will sell a lot." Other literary agents have speculated that Nixon could earn $2 million for his memoirs, but when asked if he had an opening price for the still-unsold hardcover rights, he said: "I just start out with who wants to pay the most money."

Former Beatle John Lennon, faced with possible deportation from the United States, says that he will "try and settle in Toronto." In an interview in Toronto Thursday, Lennon said that he will continue to fight U.S. immigration authorities, but Toronto is his first choice if he
